“Craft3 played an essential role for us in raising gap funding to be able to start our capital project on time so we can increase our capacity to house the homeless. Working with a mission-based lender who understands the challenges that nonprofits face and who is willing to be more flexible than a traditional lender made the difference for us in accomplishing this major project.”

Craft3 has a long history of making impactful investments that provide community goods or services and build upon the vision of local leadership and are critical to creating strong, vibrant and purpose-driven communities.

As the leading regional non-bank lender in Washington and Oregon, Craft3 has delivered over $111 million to support community facilities since 1994.

We provide critical capital access for bridge financing, working capital, inventory, equipment, real estate and debt restructure to community organizations and projects that can’t source traditional financing.

OUR INTERPRETATION

Craft3 defines community facility as a project or organization that serves a community intention or purpose. This includes nonprofit corporations, Tribal government or Tribal-owned enterprises, governmental or quasi-govt entities, B Corporations, cooperative enterprises and religious institutions. In some cases, this may also include for-profit entities with strong evidence of mission-alignment.

PREFERENCES

Over the next five years, we will deliver $50 million to projects that create lasting outcomes for communities that support:

- stronger infrastructure for organizations providing healthcare, social services, early childhood education and housing.
- more-vibrant Native communities and economies served by and anchored by community facilities projects.
- urban neighborhoods and rural community downtowns that have been preserved or revitalized in part through Craft3 investments.
- civic leaders and organizations who have developed their skills through the visioning and execution of community facility projects.
