“It was amazing to have the money that we needed to get our own equipment for packing and distribution this season. We didn't have to compromise or scramble to borrow equipment from someone else, it was ours.”

Craft3’s roots are in rural, coastal Oregon and Washington. Many of our early clients were farmers, dairies, fishers and seafood processors. In 2007, we expanded to Portland and Seattle to strengthen the connection between urban and rural — linking agriculture, aquaculture and fishing from predominantly rural communities to the urban activities of distribution and retail.

We provide critical access to capital for the entire food supply chain — from primary production (agriculture, fisheries and aquaculture) and value-added processing to distribution, wholesale and retail.

Our creative financing solutions help food and agriculture companies strengthen their business, access new markets, and enhance soil and water health.

DELIVERING RESULTS

- $103 million invested in 265 businesses
- 42 percent loans to underserved entrepreneurs
- $152 million other project funds leveraged
- 2,994 jobs created or retained
- 18,820 acres land preserved
- 583,900 gallons water conserved annually
- $152 million real estate value strengthened

PRIORITIES

Over the next five years, we will deliver $30 million to projects that create lasting outcomes in food and agriculture that:

- support small and mid-scale producers and processors
- conserve the region’s natural resources
- increase employment in the sector
- strengthen the organic and local foods movement
- influence agricultural practices that promote soil and water conservation

OUR INTERPRETATION

Craft3 defines the food and agriculture sector to include the entire food supply chain from direct production (agriculture, aquaculture and fishing), to value-added processing, distribution and retail (with the exception of stand-alone restaurants and other food/beverage service establishments).

Our focus is on existing and emerging business that support a regional supply chain that maximizes returns to rural communities and conserves natural resources.
